the 13th inst., by a large rock falling on him. Another man, Wm. Lee, was hurt at the same time, having an arm broken in three places and being otherwise injured.

The Missouri supreme court has decided that fraternal order assessment insurance companies come under the law of 1879 which makes policies of insurance companies non-forfeitable after three annual payments have been made. One western man took a policy from a fraternal association on May 12, 1893, for $5000, and was to pay at the rate of $78.60 annually. He failed to make payment on June 10, 1899, and died on January 25, 1900. The lower court held that he had paid sufficient amount to carry the insurance beyond the date of death and rendered judgment for the full amount which the supreme court affirms.—Dunklin Democrat.

The first Chautauqua assembly for Southeast Missouri will be held at Dexter, August 1-10, 1905, inclusive, and this event will mark an epoch in the moral and educational advancement of this section of the state. The manager and promoter of the Chautauqua, Charles E. Stokes, of Kansas City, is well known as one long identified with the development of the Southeast, having for eighteen years been editor of the Enterprise-Messenger, at Dexter, and prominent in every movement looking toward the advancement of his native section, both materially and morally. His wife, Carrie Lee Carter-Stokes, who is secretary of the Chautauqua, is equally well known in this part of the state, having as state and national lecturer for the W. C. T. U. appeared upon the platform in almost every town in the Southeast. Mr. and Mrs. Stokes are thoroughly conversant with platform work and capable of conducting public assemblies in every detail. The advisory board is composed of the following leading business men of Dexter: Albert H. Carter, J. J. Dowdy, R. F. Jean, C. C. Bowman, and others.
